Archaeologists continue digging

SHELLY GOLD
Senior Reporter

One week.
That's how long BYU archaeologists and volunteers have to unearth remains of the first pioneers to be buried in the Salt Lake Valley. Early graves were uncovered on a developing company was digging the foundation of a new apartment complex in Salt Lake's block 49. We knew the cemetery was somewhere in this block, but we didn't know where," said Rich Talbot, BYU archaeology site supervisor. I guess they (the site developers) want to have a Pollengeist experience," said Talbot with a laugh. In movie Pollengeist developers it a subdivision on a former cemetery and as a consequence the homes are haunted.
The graves were discovered by local people watching the contractors digging the foundation. They were apparently looking for old but not found bones instead.
BYU archaeologists are conducting excavation.
Not only are these the first pioneer graves to be uncovered, but the cemetery was built on the first Fremont site to be excavated in the Salt Lake Valley.
As the Fremont Indians would move to different places, earth would be their meeting houses and form and. The Fremont Indians occupied this area from about 600 A.D. to A.D. said Talbot.
In addition to pioneer bones, the revealing Indian arrowheads pottery. Talbot said that even as pioneers were burying their dead would have run across some infant burials.
On Monday afternoon the excavating team had uncovered the bodies of two infants and one adult, noting the two bodies accidentally covered by the construction crew.

Richard L. Hansen, an amateur archaeologist and vice president of the Utah Archaeological Society, assists in the uncovering of pioneer remains in Salt Lake City.

Talbot said at least seven people are known to be buried here and the cemetery could house as many as 25 to 30 graves. These pioneers were allegedly buried in 1848 or 1849.
One Salt Lake City man, Val Allred, said his great-great-grandmother was one of the first ones uncovered. "She was buried in a wagon box so that's how they figured it was her. We knew she was buried in this cemetery, but we didn't know where for sure."

The volunteer crew consists mainly of members of Salt Lake's amateur archaeology group. Some are more interested in the Indian aspect and others are drawn by the pioneer part of the dig.
One Volunteer, Kathryn Foster, is a graduate student at the University of Michigan. She was in Salt Lake visiting her parents when she heard about the dig.

"It's a great opportunity. There's a lot of things you learn here that you just can't get out of books," said Foster.
The bones will be analyzed and then reburied, said Talbot. "One of the main things we hope to learn from this is information about how the pioneers actually lived."
Talbot said from sampling the bones vitamin deficiencies, diseases, and actual diets can be determined.

Have faith in self

Marie speaks to fellow singles

Single adults would face challenges with a positive attitude, said Marie Osmond during a single (freestyle Sunday night at the Provo Tabernacle).
The freestyle was the final event of a four-day adult conference in Provo and on the BYU campus July 24 to 27. Approximately 5,000 single is attended the conference.
Challenges make us grow," said Osmond. "If we at our challenges and have a positive attitude and we grow... the key is our attitude," she said.
Osmond counseled that personal status does not matter — the Lord is no respecter of persons. We are all here for the same reason — to be tested and to prove ourselves," she said.
Joseph Smith said each of us came from the premortal existence where we were capable of overcoming our weaknesses. There the Lord gave us promises," continued Osmond.
First of all, he promised that we would not be into an environment that would overcome us," she said. "Second, he promised that our personal character weaknesses would be magnified so that through the guidance of the Lord, we could become like him."

Osmond also said the power each person has to become like God needs to be cultivated. "We each have a magnificent potential to develop the power within us."
Osmond said she believes there are three key elements in developing this power. The first is faith in the system.
"The system is that of the church," she said. "It breathes life and vitality into weak and failing spirits."
The second, according to Osmond, is faith in ourselves.
"Without believing in ourselves we are fighting a Goliath without the sling. We all go through setbacks and defeats, but a defeat does not mean the battle has been lost."
Osmond said it was not always easy to keep faith in herself because her personal honor has been attacked by the press — especially lately. But, she said she made up her mind early in her career that these things were not going to bother her.
"I decided that no matter what they said about me, I wasn't going to let it chip away at my personal, inner or spiritual self," she said.

Governor OKs DOT plan; lawsuits likely to follow

By STEVE GARDNER
City Editor

Governor Norm Bangert's decision to approve the Utah Department of Transportation's plan for Provo Canyon will likely result in a lawsuit.
BYU Professor, David Magley, representing Citizens for a Safe Community, said his group is meeting with attorneys, and anticipates filing a lawsuit to halt construction.
Bangert approved a UDOT plan, Monday, which would turn Provo Canyon Road into a four lane road with a twelve-inch line of paint separating opposing traffic.
The plan met heavy opposition from local citizens' groups and from the Provo and Orem city councils, the Utah County Commission and the Provo School Board.
"We hoped the governor would intervene and bring the problem to a solution," Magley said. "We remain steadfast in our belief that the proposed road is unsafe, overbuilt, and will destroy the future potential of the canyon."
The suit will likely be successful, according to Ray Davis, law professor at the J. Reuben Clark Law School. "A lawsuit will succeed. The plan that they are proposing is not the plan that they studied in their [1978] environmental impact study."

In 1983, UDOT proposed a two-lane road with periodic passing lanes, which they turned the highway into a four-lane highway. UDOT is calling the highway a two-lane highway with continuous passing lanes.
Magley met privately with the governor June 17 to discuss the road, and said he felt the governor was receptive to the citizens' concerns. "That's why I'm shocked," he said. He added a press conference today will address what further actions the citizens' groups will take, including when a lawsuit will be filed.
"It's unfortunate that the governor approved the plan," said Davis, saying a lawsuit that UDOT opponents would likely win would cost the state unnecessary money and time.

Challenger crew aware of blast, says shuttle tape

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Space shuttle Challenger Pilot Michael J. Smith exclaimed "Uh-oh!" at the moment the spacecraft exploded, and some of the crew apparently lived long enough to turn on emergency air packs, NASA said Monday.

Smith's remark, heard on a tape of the shuttle's intercom system, was the first indication that any of the seven astronauts killed may have been aware of the Jan. 28 disaster, the worst in the history of space exploration.
The astronauts could have had 6 to 15 seconds of "useful consciousness" after the explosion, said Dr. Joseph Kerwin, an astronaut physician who investigated the crew's cause of death.
The intercom tapes were recovered from the wreckage of the Challenger and analyzed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and IBM engineers.
The tape, a transcript of which was released by NASA on Monday, offered no evidence that any crew members other than Smith knew anything was abnormal prior to his single exclamation 73 seconds after launch — the very second that ground controllers lost all communication with the craft.

Schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe and mission specialists Ronald McNair and Gregory B. Jarvis are not heard on the recording.
As recently as July 17, NASA said its reviews of the voice tape indicated that the crew was unaware of the events preceding the breakup of the orbiter, but said Monday that Smith's final comment offered the first indication of crew awareness of the accident.
Admiral Richard H. Truly, associate administrator for space flight, said Monday that Smith and commander Dick Scobee could not easily have turned on their air packs and may have been assisted by the other astronauts.
"The findings are inconclusive," said Kerwin, who said his investigative team concluded the forces of the Challenger breakup "were probably not sufficient to cause death or serious injury."
Truly also said NASA has been unable to determine exactly what killed the Challenger astronauts, but he said "it is possible, but not certain, that loss of consciousness did occur in the seconds following the orbiter breakup."

From fears to tears; hostage greets family

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — The Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco greeted his family with hugs, tears and kisses Monday and called it "a dream come true" to be free after 19 months of captivity in Lebanon, his family said.

The 51-year-old, bearded Roman Catholic priest from Joliet, Ill., planned to visit the pope in Rome and prayed for the release of three other Americans he knows to be still held hostage in Lebanon.
Ten members of Jenco's family — three brothers, three sisters, a nephew and three in-laws — flew from the United States to greet him in West Germany after his extremist Shiite Moslem kidnappers freed him last Saturday in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.
"It was a very emotional 10 minutes of hugs, kisses and a lot of tears," nephew Andrew Mihelich told reporters near the U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden.
Jenco, a member of the Order of Servants of Mary, was kidnapped in Beirut on Jan. 8, 1985. He had been directing Catholic Relief Services operations in Lebanon that served both Christians and Moslems.
His family said Jenco was tired but otherwise well, considering his ordeal. The priest was undergoing tests for what the hospital director, Col. Robert W. Gilmore, described as "ongoing heart disease."
The priest appeared briefly Monday on the hospital's second-floor balcony, which was decorated with a large American flag.
His voice choked with emotion, Jenco told reporters: "I'm not too sure it's true, it's a dream come true. It's great to be back, to be loved again, to be back with the family."

Jenco, wearing dark trousers and a gray-brown, short-sleeved shirt in the warm muggy weather, looked quite fit in spite of his ordeal. He smiled a lot, waved repeatedly and blew a kiss at reporters standing at ground-level 30 feet away.
The priest called for the release of the other Americans.
"When Terry Anderson, Thomas Sutherland and David Jacobson come back again, that will be my great day of joy," Jenco said.
"I hope to be standing on this same balcony when they come back," he said. "I pray to God it will come soon."
He also called for the release of the seven Frenchmen, two Britons, one Irishman and one South Korean still missing in Lebanon.
John Jenco said that on July 2, 1985, the priest was placed with four other American hostages in Lebanon. One of them, the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a Presbyterian minister, was released Sept. 9, 1985.
Weir was the last American released by the fundamentalist Moslem kidnappers, members of the mysterious Islamic Jihad — Islamic Holy War organization.
Still missing in Lebanon are Terry A. Anderson, 38, of Lorain, Ohio, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; David Jacobson, 35, of Huntington Beach, Calif., director of the American University Hospital in Beirut; Thomas Sutherland, 55, of Fort Collins, Colo., the university's acting dean of agriculture; and William Buckley, 58, of Medford, Mass., a U.S. Embassy political officer.

Controversial Center to open fall 1987

By SHEILA SMITH
University Staff Writer

After four years of waiting for permits and approvals, the BYU Jerusalem Center is scheduled to be completed by May 1987.
It will be in full use Fall semester 1987, according to Paul C. Richards, director of BYU Public Communications.
The construction of the center has been plagued with problems. For the last year-and-a-half, the center has been in the center of a political/religious controversy. Most of the opposition to the center on Mt. Scopus has come from ultra-Orthodox Jewish communities.

Shortly after construction of the seven-story center began, the Orthodox Jews began protesting outside the construction site. They claimed the Church was building the center for proselytizing purposes to convert Jews to Mormonism.
Progress was made on May 19 of this year, when Israel's Attorney General issued a 54-page document to a special ministerial committee established by the Prime Minister to look into the "Mormon Affair." The document addresses all the allegations of the opposition, as well as the history of the project from its beginning. It states, "there have been no illegalities or irregularities in the allocation of the land, or the planning and approvals of the Brigham Young University facility."

Construction time has not been lost due to the opposition, in fact, the project is currently running ahead of schedule, according to David B. Galbraith, resident director of the BYU Jerusalem Center for Near Eastern Studies.
New programs are in the progress of being developed to be used at the new center. In addition to the undergraduate program which has been offered in Israel for the past 17 years, programs and courses have been developed to appeal to upper-division students and graduates.
The seven story, multi-tiered building will be able to house about 160 students and 40 faculty and administrators. The first floor of the building will house the learning resource center.

Former dorm resident now sleeping in jail

By SHAUNA MAYNE
Universe Staff Writer

A 22-year-old Delta, Utah, man is serving a 30-day sentence for theft of services from BYU housing.

Wesley Allred moved into Helaman Halls using a phone name and phony signatures of parents he said lived in California and he would send him money, officials said.

But Allred was not a BYU student. He was on probation in Delta and violated that probation by coming to Provo, said the arresting officer. His Utah-based officer traced him to BYU housing.

The housing official over Helaman Halls, Bart D. Stoddard, said Allred used his name and told the head resident and cafeteria personnel he had authorized Allred to move in and eat there. Stoddard said the housing employees "went on his (Allred's) word," and allowed him to move in.

"Needless to say I've told them never to do that again," said Stoddard.

At his sentencing, Allred told Judge J. Gordon Knudsen that a representative of BYU Housing had told him that charges would not be pressed if he paid for the three weeks that he lived in Helaman Halls, and that his "record would show only an arrest."

Stoddard said he was not interested in pressing charges against Allred, "mainly because he paid the debt," but he did ask for a restraining order to keep Allred off campus because he was still making visits to Helaman Halls after his arrest.

The pressing of charges was approved by the director of housing, according to Sergeant Arnie Lemmon of the University Police. "He was using our facilities and eating at our cafeteria," said Lemmon.

Allred's attorney told Judge Knudsen "30 days in prison without work leave seemed somewhat harsh" because Allred "had made restitution to BYU."

But the Deputy County Attorney, Kent Barry, told the judge the charges "didn't arrive innocently" and that Delta probation officials were "tired of working with him."

The judge allowed for the four days that Allred spent in custody after his arrest to count against his 30-day sentence.

USX lays off steelworkers; anticipates strike problems

The USX company, formerly U.S. Steel Co., laid-off 30 Geneva Steel workers Sunday, because of anticipation of a strike.

According to Jack Bollow, manager of public affairs of the Geneva plant, the lay-off was done to ensure the orderly curtailment of operations at the Geneva plant. "Because of the strike threat, operations at the plant have been reduced to support equipment that could be damaged."

Bollow explained. The strike threat has also caused some USX customers to reduce their orders, said Bollow. "There is just not enough work at the plant because orders for July, August and September have been severely reduced. Because of the strike situation, our customers are switching to other places," he added.

Utah officials ask to watch execution

POINT OF THE MOUNTAIN, Utah (AP) — Utah State Prison officials have asked for permission to witness the execution of a Texas inmate before the Utah prison designs its own lethal injection room.

"We don't have a set room or any procedures to carry out death by lethal injection," said Department of Corrections spokesman Juan Benavidez. "We're just in the planning stage, but we have to do something soon in the eventuality that we have to carry out an execution."

Benavidez said Monday that no answer has been received to the request to visit the prison at Huntsville, Texas.

Three years ago, the Utah Legislature changed state law so prisoners could choose between lethal injection or firing squad as a means of death. The choice used to be between firing squad and hanging.

Two Utah death row inmates could be put to death before the end of the year, Benavidez said.

Pierre Dale Selby, 33, of Brooklyn, N.Y., and William Andrews, 32, of Jonesboro, La., could be the next to die. Both were convicted for killing three people and wounding three others at the Hi-Fi Shop in Ogden on April 22, 1974.

They have been on death row for 12 years, awaiting the outcome of numerous court appeals.

But Benavidez said Selby and Andrews, who were stationed at Hill Air Force Base when they were arrested, have nearly exhausted their appeal options.

If that bid to spare their lives is rejected, both will have to choose the method of their execution, he said. If lethal injection is selected, the state must be ready with procedures, staff and a special room to carry out the death sentence.

Meanwhile, negotiations are still in progress in Pittsburgh. A special phone line has been set up at the Steelworkers Union Hall in Orem for word on the negotiations, said Caroline Jensen, a Geneva steelworker.

There has been little change in the management's position so far; however, information is constantly being updated on the situation, said Jensen. On Monday, news from Pittsburgh indicated there had been a slight reduction in the amount of concessions being demanded of the workers.

The company is now demanding a $2.10 per hour wage cut as well as some reductions in holidays and overtime, said Jensen. Negotiations on "contracting-out," insurance and other job class items are still being worked out, she added.

Personal incomes fall in oil and farm states

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal incomes rose a modest 1.1 percent in the first three months of the year, and residents of 10 states actually suffered declines in earnings, the government reported Monday.

The Commerce Department said energy and farm states were the hardest hit, with Alaska enduring a 9 percent income plunge, the biggest of any state. Since January, 115,000 jobs have been lost in the oil and gas industry as companies have cut back sharply on drilling plans because of the dramatic fall in oil prices.

The weak income numbers cut a swath across the farm belt as well, led by a 6.1 percent fall in North Dakota, one of eight farm states that had declines in earnings during the first three months of the year.

The state with the biggest income gain during the period was West Virginia, with a 3.5 percent increase, followed by Virginia, New Hampshire and Maine, all with 2.4 percent advances.

The 1.1 percent overall increase was down from a 1.9 percent rise in the final three months of 1985 and was the weakest showing since a 0.5 percent rise in the July-September quarter last year.

Government analysts said the slower growth in incomes was a reflection of continuing trade-related problems in farming and manufacturing and the widespread layoffs in the oil industry.

Overall economic growth has been a disappointment so far this year. The economy, as measured by the gross national product, has expanded at an anemic 2.5 percent annual rate from January through June, far below Reagan administration predictions.

The income gain looked less anemic when viewed in conjunction with the performance of the economy during the same period. In the first three months of the year, consumer prices fell at an annual rate of 1.9 percent, pushed down by the drop in energy prices. This means that while income growth slowed, the money went further because inflation was declining at the same time.

NEWS DIGEST

Two transients face murder charges

OGDEN (AP) — Two men have been formally charged with the bludgeoning death of a transient who was killed while sleeping in a vacant lot in west Ogden.

Michael James Randall, 42, of Phoenix, and Dennis James Greer, 31, of Troutdale, Va., appeared before 3rd Circuit Court Judge W. Brent West on Monday for arraignment on one charge each of second-degree murder.

The body of Dana Scott, 34, was found near the Union Pacific Railroad tracks late last week. Police found two bloody iron rods about a block away. Police Sgt. William Ladd said Scott died of massive head injuries.

At first, police thought robbery was the motive for the slaying because Scott's backpack was missing. However, Ladd said on Monday that police believe Scott was killed in a dispute over "squatter's rights," or who was going to sleep where.

Survey gives Utahns healthy checkup

A Utah Department of Health survey indicates Utahns have a very good risk profile compared to respondents in other states.

Utahns' risk is substantially lower than the national average in seven of the eight categories and the state has the lowest percentage of adults at risk in three categories: overweight, current smokers and heavy drinkers.

Six hundred and thirty-three Utahns were randomly monitored for their health habits regarding blood pressure, diet, exercise patterns, smoking, alcohol consumption and seat belt use.

While Utahns are at lower risk than people in other states, the number of state residents still at risk has not decreased. Based on results of the survey it is estimated that:

- 454,000 Utah adults seldom or never use their seat belts
- 454,000 have a sedentary lifestyle
- 177,000 are obese
- 164,000 smoke cigarettes
- 156,000 have a history of high blood pressure
- 28,000 drive when they have had too much to drink
- 33,000 have chronic drinking patterns (more than 60 drinks during the last month).

Lincoln's home to close for repairs

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Abraham Lincoln's house will be closed to tourists for 15 months beginning this fall so workers can install comforts the 16th president never enjoyed — air-conditioning and humidity control.

The 20th-century addition is part of a renovation aimed at helping the 146-year-old house and its antique furnishings withstand prairie summers and the tread of an estimated 500,000 tourists each year.

Lincoln, then a prosperous lawyer and former state legislator, bought the two-story frame house in 1844 for $1,000. He lived there with his wife and four sons until 1861, when the family moved into the White House. It is the only house Lincoln ever owned.

'Unique legacy' returns to Salt Lake City stage

"J. Golden," the popular one-man portrayal of colorful Mormon maverick J. Golden Kimball, will play throughout next month in the Little Theater at Promised Valley Playhouse in Salt Lake City as part of the 86 Summer Theatre Festival.

Actor Bruce Ackerman returns to Utah to recreate the role he originated in the premiere of James Arrington's one-man show at BYU's Little Theatre in 1982. Since then Ackerman has portrayed the outspoken, beloved general authority in more than 100 performances throughout the intermountain west, Florida, Tennessee, New Jersey and Nebraska.

He last performed "J. Golden" in Salt Lake City in Kingsbury Hall in November of 1983.

"J. Golden" opened Monday and will run daily except Sundays through August 23. Performances are at 6 p.m. on Mondays, 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays and 2 p.m. on all turkeys.

"The most people know about Golden Kimball is that he swore in church," said Ackerman in a phone interview from his New Jersey home. "He was a natural humorist, the Bill Rogers of his day, as well as a maverick and kind of a misfit who led his unique and strong personality to portray a very positive, spiritual message."

His appeal was not his swearing—it was his humor and the straightforward way he communicated the message of the gospel. He had the gift to portray that message in an extremely lightful and tender way."

Taken from the diaries, letters and speeches of J. Golden Kimball with additional family material from James Kimball, the show introduces Kimball as a 70-year-old man who, after retiring, came back to Utah to help to build the temple. He is a man of many talents, a talker in a most spontaneous, witty, humorous fashion about his life, philosophies and religion.

"I'm not highly cultured, and for me to be my natural self has proven somewhat dangerous," he confesses to the audience from a podium early in the play. Later he complains: "It seems all the stories these days are about either me or Mae West! And I don't think I deserve it."

Bruce Ackerman returns to Salt Lake City to portray J. Golden Kimball in James Arrington's one-man show "J. Golden."

Playwright Arrington calls Kimball "a folk hero," someone caught in the cracks between "history and mystery."

"The very name J. Golden Kimball conjures up spicy accounts," he said. "In fact, in a group if one person tells a J. Golden story, it will inevitably be followed by someone else recalling another and another and so on. Such was the legacy of this unique and memorable man."

Very good moments' fail to save play from confusion

LYNN DANIEL WELLER
Universe Staff Writer

The current BYU production of Shakespeare's "As You Like It," has some very good moments provided by excellent technical work and good acting. But these things do not save it from confusion and uneven nature of its action.

The action of the play, which is set in the 1590s, appears to shift from scenes like the Orient Express to the dusty towns of depression erahovennilles, to Ma and Pa Kettle's farm.

The plot of Shakespeare's comedy complex. A banished duke, his court and several people have fled to the woods from the court of a usurper. At the center of the action is the love of Orlando and the banished duke's daughter Rosalind (who pretends to be a young man). They fell in love before banishment and then take an interminable amount of time to get back together. In the forest are a bunch of yokels who, when they are guarding sheep, think of nothing but love and passion.

The production makes a great point how impoverished and starving the followers of the banished Duke are. And yet there is one character who consistently derides his fellow sufferers whenever they go out hunting deer. There is even a scene where the carcass of a deer is brought out onto the stage by actors (with blood dripping from their hands) and because one character says what a terrible thing it is to kill deer, they all walk away in shame.

Another difficulty with the play is that the character Rosalind, for some unexplained reason, maintains her charade as a young man for a long time after she is re-united with her father and her true love. She even goes to great lengths to have Orlando try to woo her as a young boy.

Towards the end of the play the action breaks down into Groucho Marx imitations and an Andrews Sisters production number. Eventually the inevitable happy ending occurs amidst a weird combination of a medieval wedding and a Broadway production number that sounds a little like it came from a Cole Porter musical.

In spite of the strangeness of the play there are some good points.

There are many strong performances in the play. Among the actors and actresses who stand out are Mark Deakins, Carrie Beutler, Ken Berneche, Reed McColm, James Clafflin, Reese Phillip Purser, Trent Bright, Tammy Jo Willis and Matt Bean.

Another recommendation of the play is the way the actors appear to understand the text and make most of what they say comprehensible. This is in no small part due to the direction of Neil Freeman, York University professor.

Freeman was brought to BYU from Toronto, Canada to direct this production. He goes back to the original folio text for Shakespeare's plays and trying to find the way the writer originally intended for his characters to speak and act instead of how many modern editors have re-written them.

THE DOMINO THEORY: YOU GET WHAT YOU PAY FOR.

Skip and Raylene thought they'd save some money. Their favorite movie, "Revenge of the Head Melters", just came out in video. They found a coupon for two large pizzas with everything. "Everything" consisted of canned tomato sauce, some cheese, and an assortment of what may have been vegetables. They ate what they could. Now they're so stuffed they can't move... They feel so cheap.

Department names Carroll chairman

The BYU Department of Technology has announced the appointment of Jim L. Carroll, an energy and business management specialist, as its new chairman.

According to L. Douglas Smoot, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, Carroll will replace E. Max Raiser who was earlier named associate dean of the college.

Carroll has extensive experience in the development of alternative energy sources. He worked with Energy Science Inc. developing, installing and operating wind-powered generators and was engaged in projects relating to the production and distribution of natural gas, said Brent Harker of BYU's Public Communications.

Carroll graduated from BYU with a bachelor's degree in 1951, then pursued additional studies at the University of California-Berkeley and Oregon State. He completed the course and thesis work for a doctoral degree in physical chemistry from the University of Utah.

NOTES

Clubnotes are published by The Universe on Tuesdays and Thursdays as a service to students.

Association of Students in Education will sponsor a fireside lecture by Dan Anderson, associate dean in the college of education on "Reflections on Teaching," Wednesday, July 30 at 7 p.m. in 205 JSB.

Saundra Stirling, program coordinator of the Bean Museum Animal Youth Program, snuggles with a marmot at the museum.

Youths to explore canyons

A youth scientific exploration program is being offered through BYU's Monte L. Bean Museum beginning Aug. 2 and ending Aug. 23. Children ages 5 to 7 will travel to nearby canyons and go on short nature walks. The 8- and 9-year-olds will hike a local canyon each week, using "scientific eyes" to learn what scientists look for.

Bosco in line for quarterback

Dickey back at Green Bay

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Longtime Green Bay quarterback Lynn Dickey, released by the Packers June 11 after contract negotiations broke down, reached tentative agreement with the National Football League team, Coach Forrest Gregg and Dickey said Monday.

Dickey said he would travel Monday night to Green Bay to finalize the one-year agreement.

"I think it's always good to go to a place where you're familiar with the surroundings," said Dickey, a 6-year veteran who in 10 seasons at Green Bay became the team's second leading passer behind Bart Starr. Dickey was paid $850,000 last season.

Green Bay Packers also announced Monday the release of veteran quarterback Jim Zorn, who joined the Packers last season after he was cut by the Seattle Seahawks. That left three quarterbacks — third-year Pro Randy Wright, veteran Vince Ferragamo and former BYU quarterback Robbie Bosco — on the active roster.

Gregg said the addition of Dickey wouldn't immediately change the current depth chart.

"Randy Wright is our starting quarterback," Gregg said. "He is still the man to beat out."

Here are the candidates, excluding Dickey, in the order presented by the Packers' pre-training camp depth chart: — Wright, 25 years old, 6-foot-2, 194 pounds.

A sixth-round draft choice out of Wisconsin in 1984, he became Dickey's backup last season but made only seven appearances as he rested an injured left knee. However, he led the Packers to a victory over Tampa Bay in the final 1985 game and had a strong showing in the 1986 mini-camp. He has started two games in two seasons.

— Ferragamo, 32, 6-3, 217 pounds. The Packers signed Ferragamo following his release by Buffalo Dec. 4. Ferragamo was activated for two Green Bay games but didn't play.

He was the Rams quarterback when Los Angeles lost to the Pittsburgh Steelers in Super Bowl XIV in January 1980.

In his eight NFL seasons, all but one with the Rams, the former Nebraska star had a 56.1 passing percentage, more than 11,000 passing yards, 65 touchdowns and 78 interceptions. Last season, he completed 149 of 287, had five TD losses and threw 17 interceptions.

Bosco, 22, 6-2, 200 pounds.

Bosco, the Packers' third-round draft choice, took Brigham Young to a national championship in 1984 and accumulated a host of NCAA passing records.

Zorn and Ferragamo say they're shooting for No. 1, while Bosco says he'll be content to learn as much as he can as quickly as he can.

Webster not the retiring type

LATROBE, Pa. (AP) — Every season, Mike Webster is asked the same question. Every season, Mike Webster gives the same answer.

All one of just three remaining veterans who played on all four of the Pittsburgh Steelers' Super Bowl championship teams, Webster faces the question: "When are you going to retire?"

There are more than a few National Football League nose tackles who feel like asking that question. On the football field, the strong 6-foot-1½, 280-pound Webster — his forearms bare like a gridiron Popeye — is certainly no shy and retiring guy.

"He remains a Pro Bowl-caliber player," said Steelers Coach Chuck Noll, not known for his superfluous superlatives. "There has been no drop-off in his level of play."

Nor has there been a drop-off in the way he levels opposing players, or in his durability.

Webster certainly is Iron Mike. A 12-year veteran, he has never missed a regular season game since joining the Steelers in 1974 — a streak that has reached 17 consecutive games.

Unless he should sustain the first serious injury of his pro football career, Webster will break the club record of 182 consecutive games (by Ray Mansfield) in the Steelers' Oct. 13 game at Cincinnati. There is a touch of irony in that, since Webster succeeded Mansfield as the Steelers' center in 1976.

Webster said there is no secret formula for his ability to play, and play well, every season, or for his ability to remain well.

"Every year you play you get more motivated," Webster said at the Steelers' St. Vincent College training camp. "I enjoy football more now than I did when I was a rookie in 1974. You learn more every season and that enables you to be a better player."

Webster was once a perennial selection to the annual All-Pro team, although some believe that Dwight Stephenson of the Miami Dolphins has surpassed him in recent seasons to become the preeminent center in the NFL.

But Webster has remained one of the league's most consistent linemen and has been named to the American Conference's Pro Bowl team for eight consecutive seasons.

Smith Fieldhouse gets new look

By ERIC B. NIVEN
Universe Staff Writer

Paint crews, working almost non-stop, are painting the inside of the Smith Fieldhouse in preparation for fall semester activities.

Working two shifts of three persons each, the paint goes on 17 hours a day. "We're running the town like a paint shop," said Richard Muhlestein, assistant foreman of the BYU Paint Shop. One shift runs from 5 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and the other from 3 p.m. to 11:30 p.m., he said. This project will probably last till the beginning of September.

This is the first time the ceiling has been repainted since the building was erected in 1951, Muhlestein said. Two coats will be used for most of the inside, the first is a primer that removes the water stains followed by a semi-gloss latex enamel, he said.

Before the painting could begin the custodial services had to clean up everything that was to be painted, Muhlestein said.

"They have done a real good job, we are really pleased with their work," he said.

The white paint will lighten up the building and reduce lighting bills by reflecting more light off the ceiling. The west end of the building will have blue paint from the floor to about 15 feet up according to Muhlestein.

The blue area is mainly for safety, said Baseball Coach Gary Pullins. "It is very difficult picking up a white baseball against a white background."

"The SFH needs to accommodate as many sports as possible."

Two one-man lifts, weighing as much as 15 tons each are being used to get up and around the scaffolding. Using the lifts saves a lot of money and time, Muhlestein said.

As soon as the lifts are not needed in the SFH, they will be used in another major painting project.

"We have been painting the football stadium now for about a month and are almost done with the inside," Muhlestein said. The lifts will be used to do the outside of the stadium.

"This work is a little monotonous sometimes," said Lance Lambercht, a junior majoring in business administration from Blackfoot, Idaho who has worked on the job for about two days, "but it's a job."

Bias' friend supplied drugs

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — Brian Lee Tribble, who prosecutors say supplied the cocaine that killed basketball star Len Bias, surrendered Monday and was jailed when he couldn't post $250,000 bond.

Tribble, a long-time friend of Bias, was indicted Friday on charges of distributing cocaine, possessing cocaine with intent to distribute, possessing cocaine and possessing PCP, said his lawyer, William Cahill.

David Gregg and Terry Long, two of Bias' teammates at the University of Maryland, were served notice of their indictment on charges of possession of cocaine, but they were not required to turn themselves in, said Prince George's County Sheriff James V. Aluisi.

Tribble, 24, was identified as the man who placed a 911 emergency call to the Prince George's County rescue squad after Bias was stricken, according to a tape recording of the conversation released a week ago.

A self-employed furniture upholsterer and former Maryland student, Tribble lives in the Washington suburbs and was Bias' close friend.

He has asked for a hearing before a circuit court judge to seek a reduction in his bail and is scheduled for a 1:30 p.m.

bond hearing Tuesday. Tribble, Long and Gregg were with Bias in his dormitory room on the College Park campus early in the month of June 19 when he died of what the state medical examiner said was cocaine intoxication.

Bias had spent the night celebrating with friends the realization of his dream of being drafted to play for Boston Celtics. He had been the Celtics' first choice, the second man taken in the NBA draft, just two weeks before he died.

Arthur A. Marshall Jr., state's attorney for Prince George's County, said before the grand jury returned indictments that he believed Tribble supplied the cocaine that killed Bias.

The grand jury that indicted Tribble, Long and Gregg will take a two-week break before returning to continue its inquiry.

Marshall said the grand jury will look into allegations drug use by other athletes, possible gambling on a game by at least one member of the Maryland basketball team and the actions of university officials, including basketball Coach Lefty Driesell, in the hours after Bias died.
